'To be honest with you, we had where we lived, we had a big field behind us. And literally we just used to play out there. I mean, I probably didn't go on holiday until I was about nine something like that. My dad worked shifts there wasn't an awful lot of money. So quite honestly, we had had a few day trips, we didn't have a car so we'd ride on busses, we used to go to Aberavon Beach, and you know very I can't think of many other places we went to be honest.'

'We didn't have options when we were young. I mean, most of the girls they either went into nursing or they went into secretarial, or they went to work in a factory or a shop, full stop. So, the grammar schools then, those are the ones, that the most of them went to university to become the teachers or whatever or whatever. But then there wasn't great options for them...those girls didn't become surveyors or anything like that. It was in the role of what females did years ago like.'
