The Modern

They only fish on weekdays and only fish successfully at night. The river cannot be fished on high tides over 7.5 metres as the silt is disturbed and the river becomes a muddy bath that fish will not travel in.

It is customary that if coracle men turn up at the same time to fish on the river they don't argue about who goes first.

They have a disc with the number of their boat on it. The coins are put into a hat and a coin pulled out. The first coin pulled out tells you who goes on the river first.

A pair of coraclemen drift down the Towy under the Pont King Morgan suspension footbridge in Carmarthen.
