

Coracle Stories

Llew Sara standing with the old Western Counties Association building behind him. The building was used as a store for unloading goods from the ships coming into the quay.

Can you see the gentleman in the white jacket?

Any left-over calico material that they had used to make the skins of the boats the coraclers then used remnants to make clothes: trousers and jackets.

They were then soaked in linseed oil and covered in a fine powder, similar to talcum powder, to soak up the oil. The clothes would then make become waterproof.
