Title: Sighting of a thresher shark, 2012.

Memory:

Text below taken from a Facebook post that Sarah wrote at the time on Cardigan Bay Marine Wildlife Centre's facebook page.

“So, Wednesdays (8th August 2012) All Day Survey was what you could say mighty successful. Filled with numerous sightings of Atlantic grey seals and harbour porpoises and our favourites the bottlenose dolphins. we also had a myriad of bird species including storm petrels, scoter, puffin, gannets, manx shearwaters and lots more sighted. But to top it off we saw a 15-20ft Thresher shark breach right out of the water (photographed by one of our passengers) as well as common dolphins (>100) in Cardigan Bay. Oh my gosh, can it get better than that?”
