

Home sweet home—in a Sunday school

CARDIFF CAR-COMPANY director Mr. Keith Payne has found a quiet country home—in a 73-year-old Baptist Sunday school

It's taking a lot of work to convert the Sunday school, in the Vale of Glamorgan village of Llanblethian, into a split-level home, but Mr. and Mrs. Payne should be able to move in by August.

"The building has not been used for some time," said Mrs. Brenda Payne. "It was originally intended for Sunday school meetings but the WVS met there and one owner used to build boats there.

"We decided to buy it because it is in a lovely spot and has planning permission."

The existing walls and the Sunday school plaque will be retained.

Chs04294-1 Grammar School Youth Club in Piccadilly chapel – November 1961

'The first full meeting of the new Youth Club was held last night (Saturday) in Llanblethian schoolroom. It was a general meeting and we had a pretty full attendance including several guests. For some people no doubt the meeting was somewhat boring, in the absence of pop records and such forms of entertainment, but I think it was quite useful for the well-being of the club, since some necessary arrangements were made and some officials appointed. Joe of course was in favour of all sorts of ideas, though several seemed to be of the opinion that dancing ought to be the main form of entertainment. Absentees were members of the school teams who had gone to Oxford, plus Goff. He had to stay behind and watch the Boarding House while his ugly brothers went to the Ball; so there was room enough for everybody in the Schoolroom'.

Article by John Yardley in The Lion magazine